eleven and ~~and~~ twelve.

Weather permitting, we mean to set out on our pilgrimage to your shrine on Wednesday morning - we shall reach Breton Woods or some such place by nightfall and have the rest of the way on Thursday forenoon - Will you take

Anne, Sister Anne, look out from your watch tower on Thursday, the third day hence, and you shall see us rounding your hill towards twelve of the - us in for lunch with two friends who journey with us, Miss Grace Arnold who knows Boston well and with whom you will establish a friendship at once - for she is all sympathetic - and the other friend Dr. Poole who is also waiting to be presented to you, else we should not bring him? If for any reason you do not want us, you can say so when I telephone you from our lodging place.

But we are all looking forward eagerly to seeing you and your wonderful Tabernacle again. I expect that you won't let us give your household any extra burdens by bringing these friends, but I couldn't you. Such a strange cold summer!

I have been more than busy with a company of "boiled brains of" nineteen and twenty - six of them in a houseparty - for a week -

They have danced and sung like grass hoppers, morning - noon - and eve - resist this opportunity of giving them such a great pleasure -

I wonder if you will be standing at the knoll with your blue filter as when we saw you first!

And oh! I hope all this unseasonable weather has not been bad for

The last of them depart today -

It has been a merry, happy time - but one feels as if a little quiet now will be welcome -

Goodbye till Thursday with my hearts love ever -

Autumn -
